

Brand New Earthquake Protection "My SUPERShelter" Enters Hot US Market for Storm Shelters

Success story: Unlimited Nextwork Group Inc., a Nevada corporation with offices in North Hollywood and Pasadena, CA, was successful in acquiring the license for the brand new invention "My SUPER Shelter" for the North American market. Wolfgang Kovacek, CEO of Nextwork, rejoices: "SUPER stands for Safe User Friendly Personal Emergency Rescue Shelter. We will manufacture, market and distribute this important piece of furniture, which gives security, protection and could potentially save 1,000's of lives in North American families during the next disaster."

North Hollywood, CA (PRWeb) January 8, 2007 -- After acquiring the desired license for North America Unlimited Nextwork Group is going to build the first US prototype for the US market. In June of 2006, My SUPER Shelter already won a Gold Medal at the largest trade show for Inventors in the US in Pittsburgh, PA.

Nextwork acquired the license rights from ManO Co SRL, a Romanian company with an American CEO, Professor Patrick O. Connelly Ph.D., CGBP, Director, Institute for Credit/Risk Management from the University of South Florida and College of Business, Tampa, Florida. Mircea Manolescu, the inventor of MySuperShelter, is constantly optimizing the product in Bucharest, Romania. An international connection that reaches the East as well as the West Coast of the US.

Not only is My Super Shelter an outstanding protection against falling and crushing building parts during an earthquake, it is also designed to protect people in case of a tornado. First contacts with the National Storm Shelter Association (NSSA) showed the importance of standardized certified products. Nextwork will seek to acquire the newly founded ICC-NSSA certification for My SUPER Shelter.

MySuperShelter will be available for sale in the US in May 2007.
